"An extremely elegant chair - from every angle"

Ross Clayton, VAST Founder, introduces the Plantation Range:

It's a very elegant Hamptons. What we've done here is used a combination of different materials to achieve a wonderful result.

One of the many good things about this product is that the skin is left on the peel and the hardwood is quite weather resistant. This makes it a perfect product for a covered deck or an el fresco environment.

The Plantation Range includes occasional chairs, dining chairs, coffee tables (in a couple of different sizes) and we have the bar stools as well.

One of the key features of this range is the rattan peel handwoven on the back is also wrapped around the outside. In the industry, this is called double-skinning a product. We thought that a chair that looks so beautiful should also look great from the back.

If you look at the rear of this chair you'll see that the frame is hidden by a veil of rattan peel. We've finished it with a whitewash that's applied by hand.

The frame looks just like teak and has a similar density to teak.. but is actually a beautiful product called Mindi.

The overall effect is of a timeless product.

This is part of the wider Plantation Range of products. It's available in two colour waves - whitewash and tallow finish (a warm brown tone). We have about eight products in this range at the moment but it's a range that's developing all the time. People love it.

We see this as an everlasting product range of VAST. If you'd like to see the entire range, go to: www.vastinterior.com.au
